How we increase your collections

When you send a citation, it carries a notice that an arbitration case has been opened, with a web link and case number the recipient can use to verify it. Seeing a real case, most simply pay you directly, usually without arbitration at all.

01 ## Add one line to your citations

Through our API, the bills you already send carry a notice: an arbitration case has been opened. Recipients go to the site, enter their case number, and see it's real.

02 ## Most settle before arbitration

The notice creates urgency the old letters never did. The goal isn't to arbitrate. It's to get the driver to simply pay you directly. Most do.

03 ## You recover what you'd have written off

The unpaid tail that used to become a write-off turns into collected revenue, with no change to how you operate.

> "The goal is to get paid, not to go to arbitration."
